Superstitions Around the World

- Don't go right home after a funeral. A Filipino tradition called "pagpag" warns that people not go home right after a funeral in fear that a bad spirit might follow you home.
- Whistling while indoors is forbidden in Lithuania. It is believed that the noise will summon demons.
- Don't cheers with water in Germany. This superstition declares you are actually wishing the death upon the people you're drinking with.
- It's bad luck to sleep with your head to the north according to this Japanese superstition, because that's how the deceased are laid to rest.
- The same superstition exists in Africa, but only if you sleep with your head to the west.
- In Turkey, an itchy right hand means you'll come into some money, but an itch on your left hand means you'll lose money.
- Feeling crappy after getting pooped on by a bird? Don't! This Russian superstition says bird poop that lands on you or something that belongs to you will bring you wealth.
- Don't knit outside! According to this Iceland superstition, knitting outside can prolong winter.
- Syria banned Yo-Yos in 1933 over fear they would cause a drought.
- In India, getting a haircut on a Tuesday will bring you bad luck.
- Women in Rwanda don't eat goat meat in fear that it will cause them to grow facial hair.
- Don't wear red during a storm in the Philippines. It is believed that red attracts lightning.
- In Sweden, you have to watch out for manholes. If you step on one with the letter A, this will bring you a broke heart and bad luck.
